

Robert Gallucci

Robert L. Gallucci began as Dean of Georgetown University's Edmund A. Walsh School of Foreign Service in 1996 after twenty-one years of government service. From 1998-2001, the Department of State announced his appointment as Special Envoy to deal with the threat posed by the proliferation of ballistic missiles and weapons of mass destruction, holding this position, concurrent with his appointment as Dean. Dr. Gallucci began his foreign affairs career at the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency in 1974. His service included the Department of State's Bureau of Intelligence and Research, the Secretary's Policy Planning Staff, office director in the Bureau of Near Eastern and South Asian Affairs and Assistant Secretary of State for Political-Military Affairs. Before joining the State Department, he taught at Swarthmore College, Johns Hopkins School for Advanced International Studies and Georgetown University. He has authored a number of publications on political-military issues, including Neither Peace Nor Honor: The Politics of American Military Policy in Vietnam. He received the Department of the Army's Outstanding Civilian Service Award in 1991 and the Doctor of Humane Letters (honorary) from the State University of New York at Stony Brook.
